Grade 0 Newsletter – March in Review

Sending a virtual hug to everyone as we take on this road of uncertainty. Thank you for your continued support at home with learning how to use Google Classroom/Google Hangout. Hopefully the madness will end soon and we can be together again.

In Language, we have been doing our usual calendar time where we discuss the day of the week, month of the year, current season and weather. We have been practicing sight words and new computer vocabulary such as “mute” and “microphone”. We are still working on those.

In Math, students were introduced to fact families and place value through song and demonstrations. A great tool on Google Classroom is the opportunity to share YouTube videos at the click of a link. They are able to watch the videos with their parents, or I have the option of sharing the screen with my students so they can see what I am seeing! Super cool!

In Science, we have continued to learn about living and non-living things. We visited the San Diego Zoo and observed some animals such as Koalas and Elephants eating and “living” their life.

In Social Studies, we finished our fire safety unit and started talking a bit about emotions- how are we feeling? We talked about how it was okay to be sad or scared during this time but there is also a lot to be happy about.

Since classes are all online now, we don't have a chance to do art together, but I am trying to incorporate art in the assignments. Here's to mastering the art of E-learning in the month of April!

XOXO
