

Grade 0 Newsletter – April in Review

Happy Spring Everyone! Thank you for your continued support at home with learning how to use Google Classroom/Google Hangout. Hopefully the madness will end soon and we can be together again with the proper safety precautions of course.

In Language, we have been doing our usual calendar time where we discuss the day of the week, month of the year, current season and weather. We have been working on sentence structure along with working on old and new vocabulary such as “summer”, “lunch”, “snack” and “weekend”. We also have been working on opposite words such as “top” and “bottom”.

In Math, students continue to work on number recognition in their books and through songs by our favorite YouTubers “The Singing Walrus”. We count together to 100 and practice greater than and less than.

In Science, we have been learning all about nature and animals. We learned about the woodpecker and why it pecks so much at the trees! We also just started learning about weather and storms. Students were able to become “weather watchers” as we looked outside and discussed the weather.

In Social Studies, we finished our discussion about emotions. We started talking about community workers and essential workers. I think this will be important for them to know since it is what is important in our current situation.

Grade 0 had a chance to earn a pajama party in honor of them having a good month of online learning. They continue to work hard and complete assignments during class. We have also been knocking it out of the park with our show-and-tell projects. They are doing amazing! Thank you again for the continued support.

XOXO
